May 22, 2018

8:00 am – 4:00 pm

Quincy Regional Training Facility
1900 Seminary Road
Quincy, IL

INSTRUCTOR: Dean Alexander – Director, Homeland Security Research Program; and, Professor, Homeland Security at the School of Law Enforcement and Justice Administration at Western Illinois University.

ABOUT THE COURSE:

Hatred is at the root of domestic terrorism, and therefore, it is crucial that law enforcement be made aware of the dynamics of the threat of hate groups on U.S. soil and craft solutions to combat it. This workshop will focus on identifying current hate ideologies and hate groups; the legacy of hate groups; the risks that hate groups pose to society; the methodologies hate groups use to radicalize and recruit prospective members; case studies of hate crimes; and various law enforcement responses to hate groups.

The capacity of hate groups/crimes to aggravate existing rifts in society, and possibly lead to retribution against other races/religious/ethnicities, underscores the need for law enforcement, and the rest of society, to strive to reduce the frequency and severity of such instances.
